Col. Snowden:

Dear Sir:

The ladies of the Adjusting Room present their compliments to Col. Snowden, thanking him for his kindness in allowing them the time, and his consideration in erecting for them a stand from which to view the parades.

Perhaps
it is owing to their being so comfortable that they considered every thing so grand a success, and made them feel particularly proud in belonging to so great a Nation. the Nation par excellence for women.

Very Respectfully

Col. Snowden:

Dear Sir:

The ladies of the Adjusting Room present their compliments to Col. Snowden, thanking him for his kindness in allowing them the time, and his consideration in erecting for them a stand from which to view the parades.

Perhaps it is owing to their being so comfortable that they considered every thing so grand a success, and made them feel particularly proud in belonging to so great a Nation – the Nation par excellence for women.

Very Respectfully,
C.C. Thorn
